The community room at Wooley Villa was bustling at the sound of clattering plates as volunteers, educators, politicians, military servicemen and friends of Wilmore police chief Steve Boven — all of whom had gone to admire him over his two decades of service and come out to wish him the best in his retirement.

The farewell reception was helped by the city of Wilmore, and dozens of people from all over the county to show their respect and honor the former police chief.

“Wilmore Police Officer,” “spouse of the leader” and “brother” were only a few but the most conveyed, of the seemingly endless barrage of kind words addressing the former police chief.

The room was filled with laughter last Thursday, Feb. 9, as well as people coming from far and near to pay their respects to the Wilmore police chief.

Jason Barkman, longtime friend and former police officer, entered the room and shared a few words about his relationship with Boven.

“I’ve never been the same without him,” said Derek Bullitt, pastor of Wilmore Free Methodist Church.

“Yet he meant a lot to this community and me,” Boven and Bullitt addressed the audience Thursday morning, as well as their other family and friends.

Boven was more than a friend; he was family.

“I am here to represent the Wilmore family and volunteers here,” Barkman said.

And in the early 90s when I was a counselor at William Elementary School, and in all our meetings, we have been very good friends. In fact, my mother adopted him as his son. That’s why we’re so close to each other. I’m his brother.”

Boven had proven to be “an extraordinary all around multigenerational police officer,” she said.

But more than anything, Doug Kooner-Buckley said, he was a model for his role and his family.

“I didn’t want my sons to grow up being afraid of policemen or the law,” she said. “I wanted them to have a real appreciation for the law, the community and community service. And that’s why I appreciate and love him.”

Longtime member of Wilmore-Rogers Woonough and told a story of a time when the police officer was put on the clock.

Boven and his wife, Pauline, also took to the stage and wished him well before heading back to his family.

There were also several other gifts given during the reception, each one with a story and special meaning for him to take back.

People from all walks of life — law enforcement, military and friends — attended the reception to show their appreciation.

EKU student Erik Wilson of Nicholasville presented research at a classroom with perfect attendance.

Counselor Renee Hager announced “Top the Charts Wednesday” during the disposal of a sports tournament event.

The team has two more tournaments before the 2012 state championships in March. Finishing at the Kent State University tournament could earn conversions for a spot in the state division.

Mid-Continental University is a private, nonprofit, Christian-affiliated organization regionally.

This year marked the second installment for The Journal’s new feature, “Top the Charts.” Each week, this newspaper will feature a picture of a person taken from your archive to see if readers can identify them. This week’s picture was taken from the March 15, 1979, issue.

Nicholasville 10-year-old sets new world record for star jumps.

Ten-year-old Joey McFarland of Nicholasville has been officially entered into the Guinness World Records book for the most star jumps in one minute. With more than 100 miles present for the 10-12, at least one of them at Johnson and Pinson in Lexington, McFarland broke the previous record of 61 star jumps in one minute.

The record is for star jumps and not simply jumping jacks. To perform a star jump, one must jump off the ground into the air, with legs apart and straight arms raised above the horizontal, forming a star shape as a result. Upon landing, knees must bend so that the bent knees touch the floor. McFarland set his sights on 100 hours of competitive training and twice as many in baseball practices and games.

Joey McFarland, 10, broke a world record for star jumps in October by performing 80 star jumps in one minute. McFarland broke the previous record for the most star jumps in one minute.

Joey McFarland, 10, broke a world record for star jumps in October.  In addition to more than 100 hours of competitive training and twice as many in baseball practices and games, McFarland trained weekly with his trainer, former University of Kentucky football player Elay Moore, to prepare for his attempt.

Can you smell it? It’s the first sign of spring, the pungent aroma of race-car exhaust that permeates the air and heralds the arrival of another season of Sprint Cup racing, and it comes with tonight’s Budweiser Shootout. The preseason opener, from Florida’s Daytona International Speedway, has a field that includes last year’s Chase drivers and previous event winners vying in a race run in 25- and 50-lap segments. Kurt Busch won in 2011. (HDTV)

Cowabunga! ‘The Simpsons’ turns 500

By Jacqueline Cutler © Zap2it

On Sunday, Feb. 19, “The Simpsons” marks an extraordinary feat — its 500th episode. The characters, which began as droopier versions in 20-second cartoons on “The Tracey Ullman Show,” have evolved, as creator Matt Groening and star Dan Castellaneta discuss in a long and very rare interview with Zap2it.

First, though, consider some numbers. Now in its 23rd season, the show has won 27 Emmy Awards, is seen in more than 100 countries and has 37 million likes on its Facebook page.

Guest stars have included Buzz Aldrin, Anne Bancroft, Tony Blair, Rodney Dangerfield, Bob Denver, Stephen Hawking, Michael Jackson, Jack Lemmon, Jack LaLanne, Paul Newman, the Ramones, J.K. Rowling, Elizabeth Taylor and John Updike. It’s in the Guinness Book of Records for having the most guest stars.

Before they worked together, Groening loved Castellaneta’s improv work, and Castellaneta read Groening’s “Life in Hell” comics; the two still get a kick out of each other.

Question: Did you have any notion “The Simpsons” would have such a life or that it would provide your livelihoods?

Groening: I thought the show would be a hit. It was always defined even when they were 20-second cartoons on “The Tracey Ullman Show.” It was designed to be a TV series. However, I didn’t think it would be that successful. Maybe we would get it on the air. I didn’t think we would have it on the air 25 years later. I have been working with Dan since ’87, and I still can’t believe those voices come out of his mouth. I am always reminded of when Dan and I were in New Orleans these days. — Teresa Flynn, Red Springs, N.C.

Q: Others know Ms. Sims as Molly, which actually is her first name. Cox was seen during the holidays opposite Jennie Garth in the Hallmark Channel movie “A Christmas Wedding Tail,” but she hasn’t done a lot of work since “Las Vegas” ended its NBC run in 2007. (Repeats continue weekdays on TNT.) She’s mainly been playing Mom, since she and actor husband Jay Mohr (“Jerry Maguire”) welcomed a son last May.

Vanessa Marciel Giovannazzo — her married name, which she uses professionally now (her husband is Carmine Giovannazzo of CBS’ “CSI: NY”) — had returned to her “General Hospital” role as Brenda for a year, but her latest run on the ABC daytime drama ended last summer. That was the last time she was on view, and as long as “GH” remains on the air, there’s the possibility she may return to it again.

Q: Will the series “Promised Land” ever be released on DVD? Some episodes are available as part of “Touched by an Angel,” but I’ve never found the whole show on its own. — Ann Wood, Clearfield, Pa.

A: As we always say, “ever” is a long time, so all we can do is address the present and immediate future. In those cases, no plans have been announced for a separate, complete release of the CBS “Angel” spinoff that starred Gerald McRaney.

A: That would correlate roughly with the time that production on the series ended, after six seasons. (We still remember an episode in which he drove Mandy Moore’s car — while blindfolded — through a very busy downtown Los Angeles, with her in the passenger seat, doing her utmost not to freak out totally.) Last fall, Angel said he would reveal the plans for his next television venture as soon as they were set firmly.

Q: Can you tell me why Palmers, the assistant medical examiner on “NCIS,” is not in the opening credits? He has been on that show a really long time. — Jerri Sunstrom, Glen Burnie, Md.

A: Yes, actor Brian Dietzen gets “also Starring” billing, which we suspect is contractual somehow. There’s no other explanation we have for someone who has been part of the regular cast for so long — and acknowledged as such by the CBS show’s fans — being separated in that way from the other long-time series regulars.

Bethenny Frankel continues her ‘Ever After’

By Kari Paloucek

Don’t expect Bethenny Frankel to go gently into reality TV’s good night. The woman who emerged from “The Real Housewives of New York City” to become a brand with her Bravo series “Bethenny Ever After” is back for Season 3 starting Monday, Feb. 20.

Ever After” is back for Season 3 with her Bravo series “Bethenny New York City” to become a brand of women who emerged from the Bible.

“Garment Industry.” Frankel to go gently into reality TV’s good night.

For Frankel, who has had her share of trials in life, including a lawsuit over the use of the Malibu house in the show, this season is going to be about overcoming past adversity together with her husband. “It’s about, you know, working through it, whether it’s in your relationship or in your business,” she says.

“I do tend to thrive when I need to survive, when I’m up against adversity,” she continues. “My whole entire relationship with my fans is about honesty, and they know what really goes on. ... If I was going to do reality TV, it was going to be reality TV, which ironically is not usually the case in many instances.”
